

MASTERCLASS IN PERFORMATIVE SOCIAL SCIENCE WITH KIP JONES

22nd & 23rd November 2007

Benefits of Attending the Masterclass

Feedback from participants in previous workshops in Performative Social Science at Bournemouth:

"I am certainly not aware of anywhere else in the country that is offering this type of event. It is a very different way of working, thinking, being."

"The interactive style of delivery and group working made it a rich experience."

"Open style, not didactic".

"A confirmation that being creative and having an art orientated way of working ... can be brought back into academia".

"I really enjoyed taking the transcript and transforming it into a visual piece. It was the first time I had ever taken part in such an activity and it opened my eyes to new methods of research dissemination."

"There is someone [at Bournemouth] who honours this work ... therefore it gives me permission to do the same, and not to hide it"

Kip Jones (BA MSc PhD) is Reader in Health Related Social Science and Leader of the Performative Social Science Group at Bournemouth University's Centre for Qualitative Research. Kip is Associate Book Review Editor for the online journal, Forum: Qualitative Research (FQS) and Editor of FQS's Special Issue on Performative Social Science (May, 2008). Recently, his work has involved developing tools from the arts and humanities for use by social scientists in dissemination of qualitative data. He facilitates the online newsgroup, Performative Social Science. Join by going to: <http://www.jiscmail.ac.uk/cgi-bin/webadmin?SUBED1=performsocsci&A=1>.
