presents a two-day Masterclass

10th & 11th November 2008, Bournemouth University

Descriptive Phenomenological Psychological Method

Amedeo Giorgi

Saybrook Graduate and Research Centre

This workshop will present the theory and practice of the phenomenological psychological method. Some basic concepts of phenomenology will be introduced and the method to be employed will be described and there will also be opportunity for hands-on work.

Special emphasis will be given to the description of structures. While psychology will be the emphasis in the workshop, the method is in principle applicable to any human science, by a shift in attitude, where descriptions by participants are available.

Amedeo Giorgi

Amedeo P. Giorgi received his Ph.D. in experimental psychology from Fordham University in 1958. He worked as a human factors specialist for Dunlap and Associates for several years and then moved on to an academic career teaching at Manhattan College, Duquesne University, and University of Quebec at Montreal and currently at Saybrook Graduate School in San Francisco. He studied phenomenological philosophy and developed the application of the phenomenological method for psychological problems based upon the work of Husserl and Merleau-Ponty. He has directed over 100 dissertations that have used the method on all sorts of psychological problems and he has published over 100 articles on the phenomenological approach to psychology. He has been invited to lecture on phenomenological psychology in Europe, Asia, Latin America, Australia and South Africa. He is the founder and original editor (25 years) of the Journal of Phenomenological Psychology and the author of Psychology as a Human Science.

Benefits of Attending the Masterclass:

The course will be of benefit to a broad range of health and social care practitioners, as well as psychologists and social scientists. The Masterclass will allow participants to explore the methodology in both theoretical and practical ways. As such, structured presentations will be attended with practical exercises and discussions. The class provides an excellent opportunity to gain experience from a leading authority in the field and allows time for participants to network amongst their colleagues.
