Ten reasons to be proud of BU

Professor Paul Curran

Mr Alan J Frost

Chair of the University Board, Mr Alan J Frost and Vice-Chancellor Professor Paul Curran declare “2009 was a great year for BU.”

www.bournemouth.ac.uk/annualreview

2009 was the most successful in our 17-year history. We maintained our standing as Number One New University in The Guardian University Guide and the fastest rising of all UK universities in The Times Good University Guide. We were finalists for two Times Higher Education Awards, considered the ‘Oscars’ of the sector: ‘University of the Year’ and ‘Research Project of the Year’. We were the fourth most improved university in the UK following the Research Assessment Exercise and our research grant tripled as a result. We achieved our highest ever score for Overall Student Satisfaction in the National Student Survey (NSS) and the Quality Assurance Agency (QAA) awarded us the highest category of confidence in our academic standards.

This year we have launched a multimedia version of our Annual Review. Visit www.bournemouth.ac.uk/annualreview to see and hear why we are so proud of BU via a series of short films featuring staff and students.

Here’s an extract from the ‘In conversation’ interview between the University Chair of the Board, Mr Alan J Frost and Vice-Chancellor Professor Paul Curran on their particular highlights.

“Early on in the year we recruited Lord Phillips as Chancellor, which is a real coup for the University... a great Dorset man and an important man in the land.”

(Mr Alan J Frost)

“I think the real surprise, to those who don’t know us well, was that we had eight centres of activity where research was being undertaken that was comparable with the very best in the world.”

(Professor Paul Curran)

“We’ve reached parts of the county that we haven’t reached before. And of course nationally and internationally, people are very much more aware of what we’re doing.”

(Mr Alan J Frost)

“I’m personally very proud of what Bournemouth has achieved over the past year but I’m also aware it’s down to the hard work and skill of many individuals: staff, students and our various stakeholders.”

(Professor Paul Curran)

New academic appointments bolster BU's profile

Over the three years to 2009, we have appointed over 150 academics, including 17 Professors and 6 Associate Professors, to facilitate the transformation of our staff profile and foster the development of our academically-led culture. The increase in our research funding following our excellent research performance has allowed us to invest in a further 40 academic appointments. Our undergraduate curriculum has been restructured and enhanced to provide a wider choice of programmes within coherent frameworks. Assessment and feedback has been improved and imaginative use of ICT continually enhances the experience of our students.

The latest Research Assessment Exercise (RAE) recognised our increased contribution to knowledge and confirmed our transformation to a University committed to academic excellence. Our research was assessed as being of a quality that ranked with the best in the world in eight subject areas: Art and Design (including Computer Animation); Archaeology; Business and Management; Communication, Culture and Media; Computer Sciences; General Engineering; Geography and Environmental Sciences; and Nursing and Midwifery. As a result of this success, the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) trebled our annual core research grant.

Science puts BU on world stage

BU academics published three papers in Science, one of the world's highest-rated research journals.

Professor Matthew Bennett's research was shortlisted for 'Research Project of the Year' in the 2009 Times Higher Education (THE) Awards. He and colleagues from the US and Africa discovered footprints left by one of our evolutionary ancestors, Homo erectus. The footprints, dating from 1.51 to 1.53 million years ago, revealed a modern foot anatomy and function with evidence that whoever left them walked much as we do today.

Professor Ralph Clarke collaborated with colleagues from the University of Oxford on a paper relating to the reintroduction of the Large Blue butterfly. At an accompanying event to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the project to reintroduce the Large Blue, Sir David Attenborough, President of Butterfly Conservation, praised the research.

The research of Professor Adrian Newton and Dr Anita Diaz showed that ecological restoration in areas of environmental degradation can help reverse global biodiversity losses while promoting the recovery of ecosystem services.

LLB Law student Jemma O'Leary, currently on placement at Bates Wells & Braithwaite, a law firm in the City of London

Many of our courses offer students a 40-week paid placement opportunity in the third year of their four-year course, enabling them to 'hit the ground running' when they graduate. Students have been engaged in a diverse range of placements at high-profile organisations, including the BBC, Disney and Microsoft. The 'From Recession to Recovery' report published by Universities UK and the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) highlighted BU as an example of best practice in preparing students and graduates for today's challenging business environment.

Pioneering placements

BU: one of the best for graduate prospects

'The Destination of Leavers from Higher Education' survey revealed that BU has one of the highest graduate employability rates in the UK. An impressive 91% of our 2008 graduates were in employment or further study within six months of graduating, a figure amongst the best in the sector and the best for a new university in England. Much of our students' success in finding employment comes as a result of the experience they gain and contacts they make while undertaking 40-week professional placements as integral components of their degree courses.

Times Higher Education Awards

BU was runner-up for two THE Awards in 2009 - 'University of the Year' and 'Research Project of the Year'. The awards are considered the 'Oscars' of UK higher education.

David Lammy, MP visits BU

Rt Hon David Lammy MP, Minister for Higher Education and Intellectual Property, visited BU to see first hand how the University is supporting graduate employability and entrepreneurship.

BU makes a real impact on the virtual world of Avatar

The talent and skills of over 50 BU animation graduates helped make Avatar a global success.

Software students in world top three

Software Systems students took third place in the world's biggest student technology competition, Microsoft's Imagine Cup.

BBC DG visits BU

BBC Director General Mark Thompson gave a masterclass in programme making for students and staff of the Media School.

Dream Lab Challenge

BU supported the first ever Dream Lab Challenge, a competition to promote UK study for Chinese university students as part of the Prime Minister's Initiative for International Education. The winning group from the Beijing Institute of Fashion won a package of scholarships worth £40,000 offered by BU and project partner Kingston University.

Santander invests in BU

BU signed a new partnership agreement with Santander to fund overseas scholarships for postgraduate students and staff.

Library award team

BU beat competition from other universities from across the UK to win the inaugural Times Higher Education Leadership and Management Award for 'Outstanding Library Team'.

Cultivating the next generation of researchers

Our fully-funded PhD studentships began in 2006 and nearly 100 students have now benefited from one of the largest such schemes in the sector. One research project, concerning environmental change and the reduction of plant diversity in Dorset woodlands, was published in the prestigious research journal, Proceedings of the Royal Society. Sally Keith's work focused on retracing the steps of Professor Ronald Good in the 1930s to assess how environmental change has affected biodiversity over the last 70 years. She examined Dorset woodlands to record the presence of trees and plants at 38 sites and assessed changes to species development.

BU has a strong enterprise culture, with students and staff working on a wide range of consultancy projects. We have a strong track record in bringing innovative consumer products to market through industrial licensing agreements with leading brands and through the formation of spin-out companies. Our experienced commercialisation team works closely with businesses to develop successful licensing agreements. Our annual Festival of Design & Innovation provides businesses with the opportunity to look for the 'next big thing' by previewing the work of over 170 design and engineering undergraduates.

Engaging with enterprise

Our new Executive Business Centre (EBC), which hosts the University's Executive Business School, is playing a vital role as a regional and national hub and ideas exchange for the world of business. During the last four months of 2009, the EBC hosted events for the Institute of Directors, the Chartered Institute of Personnel Management and the Chartered Institute of Marketing. It has also taken on a global presence, with a large number of international students enrolling for our postgraduate and executive education courses, including the prestigious Bournemouth MBA.

Law Lord takes over as BU Chancellor

Our new Chancellor, Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers, opened the Executive Business Centre in September 2009. A former Master of the Rolls, Lord Phillips was the first Lord Chief Justice of England and Wales to serve as head of the English judiciary when that function was transferred from the Lord Chancellor in April 2006. He is the UK's most senior Law Lord and became the first President of the new Supreme Court of the UK in October. Upon being installed as Chancellor, Lord Phillips said that his new role combined his two passions in life: education and Dorset.

At the end of 2009, the University published a revised Strategic Plan for the five year period from 2009/10 to 2013/14. The Strategic Plan includes detailed financial projections indicating the level and nature of expenditure on new staff, new buildings and ICT and how these are to be funded. A copy of the revised Strategic Plan and the full Summary of Accounts are available at: www.bournemouth.ac.uk/annualreview.

In 2009, BU continued its initiative, the Vice-Chancellor's Forum. This was established to engage with the local community with the aim of building a stronger network of friends and supporters of the University.

A range of key events and functions was organised by the University's Development Office. These featured guest speakers including Lord Phillips, President of the UK Supreme Court and BU's new Chancellor, Clive Stafford Smith, founder of Reprieve and Ian Livingstone, Life President of video games company Eidos.
