How will you spend your time?

We hope you had a great time while studying at BU, both socially and academically, and that your BU degree has helped you reach your potential.

Now that you have returned home, we would like to invite you to apply to become an International Alumni Ambassador. This will enable you to share your experiences of studying at Bournemouth with those who are interested in studying at BU.

As an International Alumni Ambassador you may be asked to:

- create a profile of yourself, including details of your time at BU and your current job role, which will be shared on the BU Alumni Association website
- share your experiences with prospective BU students from your country, via email, phone, and sometimes in person
- attend exhibitions and events in your country, alongside current BU staff, to speak to prospective BU students
- meet with BU offer holders before they leave for Bournemouth, to give helpful advice
- speak to other BU graduates when they return home, to support their re-orientation

All about you

International Alumni Ambassadors are friendly and approachable people, of all ages, who want to share their experiences of studying in the UK. You will have completed a qualification at BU and since returned to live and work outside the UK, in one of the regions listed above.

The amount of time you can give to the role will be discussed with you. We appreciate that you are giving your time and need to balance this with other commitments, so anticipate that the role would take up no more than two to three days a year.

Why give your time?

- To foster a supportive community, where alumni help others to fulfil their potential
- To inform potential students from your country about study opportunities in the UK, help them to make an informed choice and prepare them to make the most of their study experience
- To maintain links with Bournemouth University and extend your international study experience
- To gain experience in events and maintain links with university hosts and staff
- To add to your CV and benefit from networking opportunities
